Raleigh, North Carolina

Welcome!

I thank you for your trust, Jane Doe, in allowing me to walk you through your readings. It is a privilege for me to accompany you in your self-discovery and growth journey. What I offer you through readings is not a fixed prediction, but rather perspective and inspiration that will help you navigate life with more clarity.

Both tarot and oracle cards mirror one's psyche and provide abstract images with meanings. My interpretations will always be constructive, however, I do encourage you looking at them differently. Follow your own intuition for it will always guide you the best, Jane Doe. Accept what resonates to you and reject what does not!

Every journey is unique, and in case these sessions become a means for you to uncover life's intricacies, so be it. If you do not find these useful, have the confidence in yourself to navigate it all. Wishing you countless opportunities to reflect deeper while having a constructive journey filled with growth, wisdom, and sharp energy.

Question 1:

Please guide us, Divine Spirit, using Jane's birth chart and soul blueprint—born June 1, 1980 at 9:18 AM in Raleigh, North Carolina, and now walking her path in Portland, Oregon. What deeper spiritual purpose or lesson is unfolding for her within this emotional entanglement involving John and the third person?

Card Drawn:The Hermit (Reversed)

Interpretation:

Jane, The Hermit reversed is a loud nudge – you’ve been carrying this weight on your own for way too long, haven’t you? This isn’t just about John or Jenny... it’s about how easily you’ve slipped into isolation trying to figure it all out solo. The lesson here? You’re not meant to hold all of this in the dark. There’s been too much self-blame swirling around lately, and it’s draining your energy – fast. The reversed Hermit suggests that this phase of emotional chaos is showing you how much you’ve neglected your own voice while waiting for clarity from someone who keeps pulling away. That’s not fair – and you know it deep down.

This isn’t just another heartbreak or confusing connection. It’s meant to wake something up in you... a need to stop dimming your intuition just to keep the peace. John’s mixed signals, the blocking, the popping back up outta nowhere – they aren’t just confusing, they’re distracting you from healing. The deeper purpose in all this mess? To push you back toward your own wisdom – not away from it. You’ve been quiet, patient, overthinking every move – now it’s time to get real with how this is actually affecting your heart and your self-worth. Truth is, Jane, you already feel what’s off – it’s just been too damn hard to accept it.

By late June or early July, things should start shifting. That haze that’s been clouding your judgment? It’ll start clearing once you allow yourself to reconnect – not with him, but with your own power. Try not to look for meaning in John’s chaos anymore. It’s okay to want answers, but don’t forget your peace matters way more than any “closure” from someone who’s not showing up.

You're not lost - just re-routing. And that's more than okay!!

Question 2:

Please guide us, Divine Spirit, in revealing what John is truly feeling beneath his avoidant behavior—how does he honestly view his emotional bond with Jane, and what is driving his recent decision to cut off communication?

Card Drawn:Five of Wands (Upright)

Interpretation:

Jane, the Five of Wands upright hits like a reality check - John's mind is chaos right now. He's not sitting still with his feelings, and it shows. What's going on under that avoidant shell? Conflict - both internal and external. He does feel something real toward you, but it's tangled up in ego, confusion, and a whole lotta fear about being vulnerable. The connection feels intense for him - too intense, honestly - and instead of dealing with it head-on, he's shutting down and shutting you out. That sudden block wasn't random... it was a reaction to pressure he couldn't handle, not a lack of care.

Thing is, John sees this bond as something fiery - but unpredictable. The kind that pulls him in one second and scares the hell out of him the next. The Five of Wands says he's battling not just his thoughts about you, but also what others may be saying, or what he thinks he should feel. That's part of why he's backing off... he doesn't trust his own judgment, and instead of getting clear, he's choosing the easier (but colder) route - silence. That doesn't mean he doesn't feel - it just means he doesn't know how to handle feeling right now.

This doesn't make it right, Jane - not by a long shot. But knowing this might help you stop taking his distance so personally. He's not in a space to love well, let alone communicate clearly. Give it 3-4 weeks... you might hear from him again. But by then, you may just feel different about whether you even want to respond. That shift? That'll be your power coming back online!!

Question 3:

Please guide us, Divine Spirit, to shed light on the nature of this new connection John has with Jenny, born June 26, 1999. What energy or purpose does this 'distraction' serve in John's life, and how does it influence his connection to Jane?

Card Drawn:Ten of Cups (Reversed)

Interpretation:

Jane, the Ten of Cups reversed says a lot without sugarcoating anything - this thing with Jenny? It's not the dream he might be pretending it is. On the surface, yeah, it may look light and drama-free compared to the emotional depth he shares (or shared) with you. But beneath that, this connection is shaky... more of a comfort zone than a soulmate vibe. He's chasing an idea of happiness with her, not something solid or lasting. It's got a bit of that "let me run from my mess by starting something easy" kinda energy, ya know?

What's wild is - this new thing actually makes your absence louder for him, not quieter. Jenny isn't a mirror the way you are. She doesn't challenge him, doesn't pull at the parts of him that are still healing. And that's why it's "easier" for him right now... but also why it won't satisfy him long term. The reversed Ten of Cups screams emotional disconnection and unrealistic expectations. He might be hoping this new link fixes the emptiness - but it won't. It's more of a band-aid than a bond.

So how does this affect you? Honestly, Jane... it's delaying his growth. He's hiding in something simple instead of showing up for what's real. This doesn't mean he's gone for good, but it does mean you don't need to wait around while he figures out his patterns again. He's got some serious emotional homework to do - and that ain't your job to grade!!

Question 4:

Please guide us, Divine Spirit, to help Jane understand whether this reconnection with John—after months of silence—was a fleeting emotional impulse or a meaningful opening. What truth is Jane meant to see about this chapter of their story?

Card Drawn:The Sun (Upright)

Interpretation:

Jane, The Sun upright brings a wave of clarity - like that moment when a fog finally lifts and everything starts making sense. This reconnection with John? It wasn't random or meaningless. It did happen for a reason - a real one. The Sun shows up when truth needs a spotlight, and in your case, it's saying: this wasn't just an emotional fluke. That moment you two came back together? It cracked something open in both of you, even if he's now trying to pretend otherwise. That reconnection shined a light on what's still unresolved between you... and what's still deeply felt, even if it's being avoided.

But here's the catch - just because something is meaningful doesn't always mean it's meant to last in its current form. The truth you're meant to see here is this: John showing up again wasn't about restarting an old story... it was about giving you a chance to see where you stand now. The Sun doesn't lie - it brings warmth and truth, but also burns through illusions. And maybe now, you're realizing what you want looks different than it did a few months ago. That's growth, even if it hurts a bit.

So no, Jane, this wasn't fleeting... but it may have been revealing. The chapter itself? It's closing - not with bitterness, but with truth. Let that light guide you now - not the memory of what was, but the strength of what you're seeing more clearly than ever. You're stepping into a brighter version of your story. Keep going - you're almost through the tunnel!!

Question 5:

Please guide us, Divine Spirit, to offer Jane clear insight into the potential paths forward. What does her highest self need to know about releasing, holding on, or healing in love—so that her heart may find peace, wisdom, and alignment with what she truly deserves?

Card Drawn:Two of Pentacles (Reversed)

Interpretation:

Jane, the Two of Pentacles reversed is a clear sign – you’ve been juggling too much emotional weight for someone who’s not even holding their end of the rope. Your heart’s been in a loop, going back and forth between what was, what could be, and what still hurts... but it’s leaving you drained, not fulfilled. This card says it’s time to drop the chaos that’s not yours to carry anymore. Your highest self is waving a little flag like, “Hey... can we focus on you for once?” The imbalance isn’t just in love – it’s been spilling into your energy, your mood, even your sleep. Something’s gotta give.

This path forward isn’t about dramatic decisions – it’s about small, honest ones. Like not texting first just to feel some kind of control. Or choosing silence over chasing clarity from someone who keeps dodging it. Releasing doesn’t have to mean “never again” – but it does mean letting go of the idea that this story is your only one. You’ve been trying to hold space for John and yourself, and it’s honestly not fair. Not to your spirit, not to your peace. And yeah, it’s messy... but healing usually is, right?

Your heart deserves way more than these half-returns and hot-cold patterns. Mid to late July feels like a turning point – where this weight finally loosens, either because he steps up (rare, but possible) or you step out with clarity and strength. Don’t wait for someone else to choose you first – that choice? It’s yours now. And it’s about damn time!!

Summary

Jane, wow... what a ride this has been, right? You've been caught in a whirlwind of emotions, second-guessing yourself, trying to read between lines that just keep shifting. The deeper story here isn't just about John - it's about how much you've been stretching yourself thin, emotionally and mentally, just trying to hold it all together. There's been this quiet pressure to make sense of everything while still carrying the weight of uncertainty, and honestly? That's exhausting. It's no wonder your heart feels kinda stuck between wanting to stay and knowing it might be time to walk away.

What's clear is that this connection - as intense and real as it's felt - hasn't been offering you the safety and emotional return you deserve. You've been giving and giving, hoping that maybe the next time he reaches out, it'll be different. But deep down, there's this part of you that's starting to see the pattern for what it is. The on-again, off-again push-pull isn't just hurting... it's confusing your own inner compass. And it's time to stop dimming that. You're not wrong for feeling what you feel - but you are being called to finally put yourself first, even if it's hard at first.

The biggest truth rising from all this? You're ready for more - more clarity, more reciprocity, more peace. You've done your emotional homework, Jane. You've felt all the things, tried all the angles... now the energy is shifting toward you finally letting go of what's been holding you back. July might bring some final clarity - whether through him reaching out again, or you realizing you don't need that closure after all. Trust this process. You're not broken - just breaking out of a cycle that no longer fits.

Remedies:

Jane, for emotional clarity and inner peace, consider carrying amethyst. It's a powerful stone for calming overthinking and easing emotional fog - especially when you're trying to let go of someone who's tangled up your energy. Keep it close, in your pocket or under your pillow, to gently support your heart through the day-to-day waves.

For you, the color blue - especially deep indigo - can bring in balance and calm. Wear it, sleep in it, or meditate with a blue scarf over your eyes. This shade helps settle anxious thoughts and reminds your spirit it's okay to slow down, breathe, and just be for a moment.

Use the affirmation "I trust what leaves my life was never meant to dim my light." Say it each morning, or any time you catch yourself spiraling in doubt. This isn't just a line - it's a permission slip to stop fighting for someone who won't fight for you back.

Another great support for you, Jane, is rose quartz. This gentle stone isn't just about romantic love - it's about rebuilding love with yourself. Keep it on your nightstand or wear it on a necklace close to your heart. Let it remind you, daily, that you are enough - even when someone else forgets how to see that.

Best Wishes
